NAZI TANK FORCES MENACE STALINGRAD

American Troops Fighting with British in Egypt

General Rommel Starts Offensive To Wrest Egypt And Suez from the Allies

Heavy Dive-bombing Attacks Typical of German Tactics Precede Thrust Made by Axis Forces Just North of the Qattara Depression Flank of El Alamein Line; U. S. Planes Are in Thick of the Battle

By HARRY CROCKETT

CAIRO, Sept. 1 (AP)—United States land and air forces fought grimly tonight alongside Britain's army of the Nile against a new and perhaps the supreme German offensive to wrest Alexandria, Egypt and the Suez from Allied hands.

Preceded by the heavy dive-bombing attacks typical of German tactics, the Axis forces under General Erwin Rommel opened the new drive just north of the Qattara Depression flank of the El Alamein line at dawn yesterday.

Tank columns of Rommel's African corps, supported by elite light infantry soon thrust forward and made some initial penetrations into the British mine fields about Qattara, but a push in the center by the Italians was stopped almost as it started.

United States fighter planes were in the thick of battle, routing two flights of Stuka dive-bombers which were forced to jettison their bombs. At least seven were shot down without Allied loss. The B-25 bombers, of the type which other Americans used to bomb Tokyo, continued their ceaseless attacks upon the long and sinuous communication lines through the desert sands.

Allies Were Ready

But this was the first time that United States land forces had come to grips with the enemy in Egypt, and the Americans and British were ready.

The attack in the Southern sector of the El Alamein line, seventy-five miles west of Alexandria, had been expected and the German armored force was shelled heavily by artillery and bombed from the air as it pushed ahead.

Reuters reported from Cairo that the Germans had advanced eight miles into the Southern minefields. London estimated the Axis strength at 141,000 troops.

Rommel's Ninetieth Light Infantry north of the impassable salt marshes tried to push ahead simultaneously but became tangled in another minefield and was shelled heavily by British artillery. Then Allied forces attacked. That was a signal for action along the entire thirty-mile front extending from the depression to the Mediterranean.

Japanese May Be Preparing To Attack Siberia

Reported Taking Defensive in Chinese-Burmese Theater of War

NEW DELHI, Sept. 1 (AP)—Lt. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell declared today that he just had received unconfirmed reports that the Japanese seem to be taking the defensive everywhere in the Chinese-Burmese theater—which may mean preparations to attack Siberia.

Stilwell, who is the United States Commander in Chief in India, China and Burma, said the Japanese were known to have "very strong" troop concentrations in Manchukuo and added, in answer to a question, that he thought there was a "good chance" that they would attack Siberia.

"That's just my guess, of course," he said. "I've been wrong before."

The general, here on an inspection of the Far Eastern military situation, said he could not check on his information until he returned from India to his China headquarters.

He said it referred, however, not to the well-established Chinese advances in Chekiang and Kiangsi provinces but to unconfirmed stories that the Japanese are building defense works along the Indo-China border and are occupying block houses along the Chinese railways in their possession.

If these reports are true, Stilwell said they are significant.

OIL TANK CAR SAVED FROM INFERNO

A crane saves a tank car from the fiery end of twenty-eight others, all loaded with fuel oil, which burned after lurching off the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad tracks at Havre de Grace, Md. The cars Jackknifed across the tracks and dumped flaming oil over the track.

Decision Is Made To Ration Fuel Oil, Nelson Says

May Be Imposed upon Some Midwestern States As Well as the East

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1 (AP)—Chairman Donald M. Nelson of the war production board today confirmed reports that a decision had been made to ration fuel oil and indicated that an announcement would be made later this week. The fuel oil rationing may be imposed upon some Midwestern states, Nelson said, as well as the East.

Meanwhile a committee set up by the Petroleum Industry War Council to study oil trends and recommend action raised the prospect that gasoline consumption in the East might have to be curtailed even further by reducing the unit value of the ration coupons, which are now good for four gallons.

Nelson said that several details of the fuel oil rationing remain to be worked out, including the question of which states should be included in the ration area. The purpose of extending the rationing to the Midwest would be to make additional railroad tank cars available to supply the east.

President Roosevelt, commenting on the situation at his press conference, mentioned twenty-five per cent as the likely amount of curtailment in some localities, which he did not specify.

From sources in the agencies working on the matter, who declined to be quoted by name, it was learned that a basic ration was contemplated which would permit heating homes to an average temperature of around sixty-eight degrees, with supplemental rations to be issued on the basis of need. These sources also reported that it was planned to induce householders to convert their heating equipment from oil to coal by withholding supplemental rations from those who fail to do so where possible.

In connection with the Eastern gasoline situation, the Petroleum Industry committee reported that Eastern gasoline consumption averaged 511,000 barrels daily from July 22 to Aug. 22 while the expectation was that only 435,000 barrels daily could be supplied for the next seven months.

U. S. OFFICERS TAKE MEASURES TO AVERT TROUBLE IN IRELAND

Irish Rebels Believed Preparing To Attack American and British Soldiers; Illegal Cache of Arms and Explosives Are Discovered

[By The Associated Press]

BELFAST, Northern Ireland, Sept. 1—United States military authorities, taking extraordinary precautions to avert trouble following the discovery of two illegal caches of arms and explosives allegedly intended for Irish Rebel attacks on American and British soldiers, tonight declared this Ulster city out of bounds for the A.E.F.

The order was issued as the hour drew near for the execution of Thomas Williams, 18-year-old member of the outlawed Irish Republican Army, and Northern Ireland police drafted police from surrounding countryside for patrol duty in the Ulster capital to put down any violence.

The police who said they believed the explosives and arms were to have been used against American troops pointed to an ira manifesto in which the outlaws reserved the right to clear Northern Ireland of the A.E.F. by "whatever measures present themselves."

Explosive Dump Discovered

An explosives dump was discovered outside Belfast Sunday night and seized after a gun fight. Finding of the arms cache was disclosed today.

The ira's scale of preparations, as disclosed in a police statement, suggested to some authorities that an outbreak similar to the 1916 Easter rebellion was perhaps planned or that a plot was on foot to conduct the kind of guerilla warfare which the Irish later conducted against the hated English "Black and Tans."

Williams was to be hanged for the slaying of constable last Easter morn, and authorities feared the day might turn into a "Black Wednesday."

The ira was mainly worked up about the Williams case, but aul (Continued on Page 2, Col. 7)

Togo's Resignation Leaves Japan Free To Attack Siberia, Dynan Says

Military Clique More Than Ever in Control of Imperial Policy

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following interpretation of the resignation of Japanese Foreign Minister Togo is by a member of the former Associated Press Bureau in Tokyo who returned to the United States last week after months of internment in Japan.

By JOE DYNAN

NEW YORK, Sept. 1 (AP)—The sudden resignation of Japan's foreign Minister Shigenori Togo leaves the military clique in the person of Premier Hideki Tojo more than ever in control of imperial policy, free to thrust at Siberia at any moment.

Coupled with Japanese actions elsewhere, on the continent and in the Aleutians, the withdrawal of a known exponent of a neutral attitude toward the Soviets certainly paves the way for Japanese attack to the North.

Besides giving Premier Tojo absolute and direct control of Japan's foreign relations, the shift gives the premier a formidable weapon—the mere threat of an attack—to use in a nerve war seeking to force the cessation of Siberian outposts to Japan.

In Tokyo before last June there were rumors that Japan had been seeking to negotiate with Russia for such a cessation from the time Ambassador Yoshitsugu Takekawa returned from Moscow because of "illness."

These rumors said Japan was asking Russia to surrender the Northern half of Sakhalin Island, Kamchatka peninsula and the Siberian Maritime provinces which embrace Vladivostok to Japan for "safekeeping" until the end of the war.

Togo's explanation of his resignation as announced by the Japanese radio has a sinister note. It was (Continued on Page 2, Col. 4)

Allies Lash Out At Japanese In New Guinea

Australian Ground Troops and U. S. Fliers Mop Up at Milne Bay

GEN. MacARTHUR'S HEADQUARTERS, Australia, Wednesday, Sept. 2 (AP)—Japanese ground forces fighting their way overland in New Guinea toward the big Allied base at Port Moresby have attacked Allied positions at Kokoda with increased strength and as a result ground fighting there has been intensified. Allied headquarters announced today.

Allied air fighters gave effective support by twice strafing the Japanese heavily, a communique said.

The opposing forces were fighting East of the towering Owen Stanley mountain range which affords a natural barrier to the Japanese troops which drove overland sixty miles from their invasion base at Buna.

Jungle Fighting Continues

In the Milne bay area in South-eastern New Guinea "scattered jungle fighting of a guerrilla type continues" in the Allied attempt to annihilate the last remnants of that thwarted Japanese invasion.

Kokoda is only a small native settlement where a makeshift air-drome once served peace-time needs. The airport now has been smashed by Allied air attacks, and Australian bush fighters have been holding the enemy at that point for weeks.

Japanese Increase Pressure

Increasing Japanese pressure there apparently was the result of the enemy reversal at Milne bay. The Japanese had intended to establish another foothold at the latter point in a gradual attempt to encircle Port Moresby, or at least cut the supply lines to Australia.

For days now Allied bombers and fighters have pounded Buna, the feeder point for the Kokoda salient. Many grounded Japanese planes have been smashed, and precious supply and fuel dumps destroyed, in an Allied attempt to pinch off the Kokoda invasion just as that at Milne bay was thwarted.

Japanese bases at Salamaua and Lae far to the North along the Eastern New Guinea coast also have been attacked, and Allied patrols still are operating outside Salamaua in jungles. Thus all five Japanese lodgements in New Guinea have been hard hit as General MacArthur's air force increases in strength.

Communications with the Milne bay fighters was arduous and scant, but the situation was summed up late yesterday thus:

The last Japanese survivors of the latest enemy incursion on the extreme Eastern tip of the island were compressed into a narrow peninsula north of the bay and planes were strafing them overhead and land forces were captured and at one place fifty bodies were found.

The Allies had established an airfield in the sector, and seven Japanese fighters which attacked it caused no damage.

Some 400 miles to the Northwest, forward forces of both sides skirmished in the Salamaua sector inconclusively. The very fact that Allied troops had penetrated to the Salamaua region suggested another offensive might be in making to erase the Japanese holding there.

At nearby Lae, fires visible thirty miles were set by Allied medium bombers which unloaded ten tons of bombs on grounded planes, fuel dumps, buildings and installations. The Allied raid obviously surprised the enemy, since no planes rose to intercept and only desultory ground fire was encountered. About midway between Milne bay and Lae, fighting continued in the (Continued on Page 2, Col. 3)

Huge Nazi Tank Forces Drive Still Closer to Stalingrad in Advance on Two Sectors; Soviet Troops Are Fighting Fierce Defensive Battles but Are Forced To Withdraw to New Positions

Treasury Lowers War Bond Quota For September

Goal Is Fixed at $775,000,000; Sales below Quotas in July and August

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1 (AP)—The treasury today set its September quota of war bonds sales at $775,000,000—considerably lower than recent months—but disclosed an intention to build up to a goal of nearly $2,000,000,000 in January.

Film stars, who are leading the September campaign, have set an unofficial goal of $1,000,000,000 for this month, and the treasury hopes they are right. But the official quota was set lower by $225,000,000 because in past years September usually was the poorest month for selling either baby bonds or defense bonds.

However, the same officials reiterated the treasury's intention of averaging $1,000,000,000 a month on a yearly basis, and explained that quotas of more than $1,000,000,000 a month are in store this winter to make up for the slack months.

The "slack" has been accentuated by three successive failures to make monthly quotas. The first quota was $600,000,000 in May, and sales then totaled $634,400,000. In June, the public filled only $633,900,000 of an $800,000,000 quota, and in July, $900,000,000 of a $1,000,000,000 goal. August figures are not complete, but sales were about $700,000,000 against a quota of $815,000,000.

Continued failure to meet the quotas, officials admitted freely, might hasten the day when Congress would, by law, decide how many bonds every person would buy. Some lawmakers have long favored "compulsory savings," and a number of President Roosevelt's influential advisers outside the treasury endorse it now.

The treasury's continued efforts to make voluntary bond buying work, a spokesman explained, are due both to the morale value of a voluntary effort and to the fact that since Pearl Harbor, war bond sales have aggregated $6,250,000,000 in eight months—an amount which he argued was highly respectable by any past financial standards.

The arguments for compulsory saving include contentions that the plan would distribute the burden of war financing more equitably and that it would raise amounts of money more nearly proportionate to 1942 budget standards.

SENATE FINANCE COMMITTEE'S TAX PLAN IS ATTACKED BY LA FOLLETTE

Charges Individual Taxpayers Will Be Taxed To Make Up Lost Revenues

By JACK BELL

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1 (AP)—Senator LaFollette (Prog-Wis) charged tonight that the Senate Finance committee was preparing to make up "out of the hide" of individual taxpayers approximately $1,000,000,000 of potential annual revenues lost in its revisions to date of the new tax bill.

With the measure standing about $3,400,000,000 short of providing the $3,700,000,000 increase in revenues sought by the treasury, LaFollette told reporters it seemed evident to him that the committee planned to "soak" individuals to make up part of the difference.

On motion of Senator Connally (D-Tex.), the committee rejected today a treasury proposal to eliminate percentage depletion allowances for petroleum and mine ventures and to establish such credits on a cost basis. Randolph Paul, treasury general counsel, previously had said such a change would add $200,000,000 in yearly revenues and would not interfere with the war effort.

MOSCOW, Wednesday, Sept. 2 (AP)—Huge German tank forces have driven still closer to Stalingrad in advances on two sectors Southwest of the key Volga river city in their supreme effort to knock Russia out of the war, the Soviets acknowledged early today.

In an unusually gloomy midnight communique the Russians said their troops were fighting fierce defensive battles Northwest of Stalingrad, but had to withdraw "to new defensive positions" on one sector in the Southwest as the Nazis drove "a wedge into our defenses" in another.

Emphasizing the strength of the attacking Nazi tank forces Southwest of Stalingrad, the daily bulletin said:

"After concentrating large tank forces on one sector, the Germans launched an attack and drove a wedge into our defenses. Our units are waging fierce battles with a group of enemy forces which has infiltrated into our positions. On another sector our troops by order of the command withdrew to new defensive positions."

A further Russian retreat also was acknowledged South of Krasnodar in the Western Caucasus on the road to the Black sea naval base of Novorossiisk.

Fierce Fighting Prevails

The Russians told today of unusually fierce fighting on every sector on which they gave ground and also at other points, but nowhere did they report any Red army advances.

Northwest of Stalingrad the Russian lines apparently were holding and the Red army was trying to exploit gains on the Axis flank near Kleitskaya inside the Don river bend.

German troops had bolstered Italians on that flank to counter-attack the Red army at Kleitskaya, the communique said. "Several attacks launched by German and Italian infantry were repulsed with (Continued on Page 2, Col. 3)

2 Chinese Columns Are Approaching Jap-Held Kinwha

City Is Site of One of Last Japanese Air Bases in Chekiang

CHUNGKING, Sept. 1 (AP)—Two columns of the Chinese army which swept from Kiangsi province into the coastal province of Chekiang were approaching Kinwha tonight from the west and south, front line dispatches said. The city is the site of one of the last Japanese-held air bases in Chekiang.

The column in the west was reported to be only nine miles away, while the southern column, said to have recaptured six towns in a thirty-mile sweep above liberated Sungyang and Lishui, was twelve miles distant.

The high command announced that Japanese reinforcements, dispatched to the front in an attempt to halt the Chinese, had been routed after an ambush as they moved up a branch railway line between Kinwha and Lanchi.

The Japanese have held Kinwha since last May 28. An army spokesman said the Chinese had also advanced closer to Nanchang, main Japanese base in Kiangsi in the western half of the twin drive. Kiangshancheng, on the east bank of the Kan river below Nanchang, fell to the Chinese August 29, the spokesman said.

Continuing strong Chinese pressure in both the old and new war areas in Chekiang and Kiangsi was foreseen by the spokesman as the Japanese "yield newly occupied points so that the older positions in other parts of China might not be endangered and the Japanese war machine crack."

Maryland Sells July Bond Issue For Record Price

Baltimore Firm Offers Lowest Interest Charge in State's History

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Sept. 1 (AP)—Bringing a record-breaking price, Maryland's July bond issue was sold today to Alexander Brown and Sons, of Baltimore, an investment banking concern, which offered the lowest interest charge in the state's history.

Offering $486,113.01 for the $401,000 bond issue, the Baltimore firm submitted an interest charge of .96 per cent, accepted by the State Board of Public Works as the most favorable bid.

Sale of the bonds for the final six months of the current issue was viewed by Governor O'Connor, public Works Board chairman, as indicative of the state's "sound fiscal policy." Nineteen brokers were on hand in State Treasurer Hopper S. Miles' office to bid on the bonds.

State Comptroller J. Millard Tawes, member of the Board of Public Works, said the bonds would mature serially from 1945 to 1954. The $401,000 issue was pared last month from an authorized $651,000. Last January, when only $322,000 of an authorized $807,000 were sold, the public works group ordered a curtailment of $285,000.

The January Bonds had brought an all-time high in state sales, netting the state $524,349 at an interest charge of 1 1/4 per cent.

A 1942 bond issue of $2,317,000 had been authorized by the 1941 legislature.

Although the bonds are tax-exempt, the purchaser was given the privilege of withdrawing between the date of the sale and the date of delivery should federal legislation or administrative ruling place an income tax on them.

State Treasurer Miles said the second most favorable bid today was that of investment banking firm Dick and Merle Smith, of New York, which offered a price of $485,534.90, and an interest charge of one per cent.

Financiers Rank State High
O'Connor declared the fact that "a record-breaking price for Maryland's bonds was received today" means that in the opinion of the leading financial people of the country, Maryland ranks at the highest. Today's sales price, which was on the basis of .96 interest rate x x x is the highest price ever bid for state obligations.

"It is significant that nineteen of the leading brokers of the country, from all sections, bid on this issue. Incidentally, all of their bids were high as there was very little difference among the group."

"There is no doubt in my mind that this record-breaking result is due in part to the fiscal policy which has been maintained during the present administration. Maryland's budget has been balanced. We have refused to borrow money for current expenses and economy has been practiced without impairment to the essential functioning of the state."

Excuse War Plants In Air Raid Tests Surprise Alarms Present Something of Puzzle, Col. Barrett Says

BALTIMORE, Sept. 1 (AP)—Vital defense industries have been excused by the government from participating in surprise blackout tests in Maryland in September so that war production may continue without interruption.

But when the sirens begin to shriek how will they know it's only a test and not the real thing? That the problem which confronts Col. Henry S. Barrett, state director of air raid precautions, and state and regional defense officers as they prepare for a conference tomorrow, the meeting, originally scheduled for today, was postponed when one of the officials was unable to attend.

Col. Barrett said there are some 100 war industries in Baltimore city alone and others in various parts of the state which would be affected by the government's ruling. The problem, he said, was to find a way of preserving the surprise element in the September test without interfering with these vital industries.

No one in the area, not even himself, Col. Barrett said, is supposed to know when the alert will be sounded. The first fighter command, he said, would issue the warning signal to the army fighter center in Baltimore and the latter would relay it to the various control centers.

"Hitler won't tell us when he's coming, so there is no reason why the civilian defense authorities should know when or where to expect the alarms," Barrett said.

INTERPRETING THE WAR NEWS

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

—INTERPRETING WAR—P. 2.
Military and political developments from Egypt to Tokyo indicate that Hitler knows a crisis is at hand for him in Russia.

Another Russian winter is only weeks away. And so far as weather reports can be assessed in a world so topsy-turvy with war that even the weather is a military secret, an even worse Russian winter than the last is in prospect.

No Doubt of Effort

As this is written there seems small doubt that the Axis master has launched his final effort to smash Russia or render her impotent before that Russian winter is upon him. More than his flair for showmanship dictated the orders that sent Nazi-Fascist forces in Egypt lunging forward again as the fourth year of the war opened. It must be more than mere coincidence that a Tokyo war cabinet shakeup on that date ousted the negotiator of the flimsy Russo-Japanese non-aggression pact.

The Togo resignation as Japanese foreign minister looks like the most ominous indication to date that, at Berlin's bidding, Japan is about to strike at Russia. As Japanese ambassador to Moscow, Togo negotiated the non-aggression pact which paved the way for Pearl Harbor. He was rewarded with the cabinet portfolio he has now relinquished, probably as a personal face-saving preparation for Japanese violation of the pact.

That cabinet up-set follows a startling retreat in China. All in all, Japan seems preparing for an attack on Russia, timed to abet to be called ahead of those with wives and children with whom they maintain the usual family relationship.

Hershey said the new procedure would spread inductions so as to achieve the "objective of calling men from the small town and from the city on an approximately uniform basis."

Local boards, meanwhile, were ordered to complete the classification of all registrants by October 16, including the reclassification of 3-A men with collateral dependents.

This speedup was necessary, he said, because "the seriously military situation" indicates that the monthly calls of 1943 will "be equal to or in excess of the monthly calls made in August, September and October of this year."

On the question of registrants between 18 and 20, Hershey said no one would be called until he had reached 20 years of age, "until such time as Congress may modify the law." A request that Congress authorize the drafting of men 18 and 19 years of age, has been widely predicted in the capital.

Would Change Draft Law

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1 (AP)—Senator Gurney (R-SD) said today he was drafting for introduction in the Senate Thursday an amendment to the Selective Service act which would make 18 and 19 year olds registrants liable for induction into the armed forces.

Declaring that action of this nature should have been taken by Congress long ago, Gurney said:

"We ought to induct them now so that they can have an opportunity to get the training they need and be able to protect themselves when we have to send them into battle."

Senate Finance

Pollette declared after the session, it becomes apparent where additional revenue is going to have to be obtained. The individual taxpayer is going to get the axe just where the chicken got it."

The new tax bill, as it passed the House, was estimated to raise $6,271,000,000 in new revenue but Senate committee actions have cut this by about $1,000,000,000.

Deductions have included approximately $874,000,000 net in potential corporation taxation, $170,000,000 represented in a House-approved freight tax and $175,000,000 by insertion of a provision giving individuals the right to claim certain credits against their income tax liability for unusual medical expenses.

Against these, the committee voted a $220,000,000 increase in taxes on individuals through lowering of the present law's income tax credit for dependents from $400 to $300.

The Senate committee cleared the decks for consideration tomorrow of treasury proposals for a new tax on individual expenditures. As tentatively outlined, this would involve a graduated tax, possibly starting at ten per cent, on all money spent by an individual during a year in excess of the amount represented by his ordinary income tax exemptions and deductions, plus special allowances for tax payments, retirement of debts, purchase of government bonds and other savings.

Upholds House Action

The committee's action on the depletion provision sustained a previous House refusal to change the rate of the present law. Petroleum operators now are permitted to deduct twenty-seven and one-half per cent of gross income from oil and gas properties for depletion. The rate for sulphur is twenty-three per cent, metal mines fifteen per cent and coal five per cent.

The House committee approved the House's addition of fluorapatite to the list at fifteen per cent, but members said it rejected a proposal by Senator Barkley (D-Ky.) to include asphalt and clay products.

Terms War Plant Strikes, Treason

Senator Rufus C. Holman Also Charges Press Freedom Is Gone

SALEM, Ore., Sept. 1 (AP)—Men who strike in war industries are no better than traitors, and it is time to stop mollycoddling them, Sen. Rufus C. Holman, (R-Ore.) said today in an address to the Salem Kiwanis Club.

A member of the Senate Military Affairs committee, he criticized the "intolerable delay" in production of war materials. He charged that President Roosevelt had ignored the stockpile of strategic materials which was authorized by Congress in 1939 and did not begin to create the stock pile until a few weeks before America entered war.

"Wholesome truth and not propaganda is what the nation needs," he declared. "Local newspapers are the victims of a controlled press, printing only that which is handed them."

"This Northwest country is undefended. This was demonstrated at Fort Stevens when a Japanese submarine at 16,000 yards outranged by 2,000 yards the coast defense guns at Fort Stevens, a fact that the Japanese were well aware of."

Holman recently returned from Alaska where he inspected defenses of the territory, but he did not refer to Alaska in his speech.

Supreme Effort

heavy losses to the enemy," it added.

Fifteen Axis tanks were destroyed and 600 of the enemy were killed in the fighting at Kletskaya and Northwest of Stalingrad where the Russians apparently were faring better than to the Southwest.

Heavy fighting raged in the mountain passes South of Krasnodar where the Russians acknowledged numerically superior enemy forces forced the Red army to withdraw to new positions.

On the Central front before Moscow the Russians who had previously announced an offensive of their own reported Axis counter attacks.

On the Leningrad front the Russian Allies of the Germans had made a surprise march of 450 miles across marshes and through forests to strike "unexpectedly at the enemy's communications." About 750 enemy troops were killed on this successful foray, the communique said.

Volga Is in Peril

The peril to the Volga was evident in other Russian dispatches, too. Volga sailors and marines were reported now reinforcing the Red army as well as factory workers from Stalingrad. It was a fight beneath a scorching sun to prevent the Germans from seizing the vital waterway and cutting the Red Southern and Central armies and also severing the only effective supply route from the Allied Middle East.

The heat on the flat and sandy plain between the Don and Volga was so intense that soldiers were fighting at night, sometimes with tanks, for possession of shallow wells. Tanks also were being loaded with pots, buckets and barrels and serving as water carriers. Candles melted by night in the heat and, by day, the only shade was provided by the billowing smoke of the battle itself.

On the basis of Russian reports received by late afternoon, this was the situation, front by front:

Stalingrad:

South of the city one Russian force withdrew before the impact of great armored forces and fresh reserves.

An "SS" division and new reinforcements of Italians, Hungarians and Rumanians were appearing in the lines. On the Russian side, Red marines were in action and in one area, strong Soviet counter-attacks captured fortifications guarding the German line of fortifications.

Central Front:

The Soviet offensive has slowed up because of German counter-attacks employing reserves, but the Northern sector of Rzhev, 130 miles from Moscow, evidently remained in Soviet hands.

Black Sea:

Battles flared fiercely as the Nazis sought to endanger the naval stations of Novorossiysk and Tuapse from sea and mountain. The Russian newspaper Pravda said Soviet warships and warplanes had thwarted German attempts to land on the coast from barges and transports. Cossack cavalrymen and mountain guerrilla bands were handing the invaders hard blows in the mountain passes Southwest of Krasnodar.

Mid-Caucasus:

The Germans tried to cross a water barrier in the Prokhladnenski region, but were thrown back with heavy losses.

Upper Don:

A sudden Soviet air attack on a German airbase South of Voronezh was reported to have destroyed sixteen Junkers—88s, one Focke-Wulf fighter, three gasoline dumps and three AA batteries.

Kokoda area. Fighter planes strafed the enemy in co-operating with land patrols. These Japanese were halfway across New Guinea to Port Moresby, the northernmost Allied base, but still were barred by the 14,000 foot Owen Stanley range which is virtually impassable.

The roadhead from which the Kokoda force came was under attack of heavy Allied bombers. The big craft swept in low over Buna, starting fires and silencing anti-aircraft positions.

At headquarters, the belief was expressed that the Japanese on Milne bay had been hard pressed. Otherwise, they would have carried away their dead comrades, a necessity of Japanese religion. The difficult communications with the swampy sector hid most details of the fighting, including the number of surviving Japanese.

Police Hold Man For Firing Five Shots at Woman

Baltimore Resident Is Struck by One Bullet in Frostburg Shooting

Frank Carey, 29, Frostburg, was held in Allegany county jail last night after he allegedly fired five shots from a .38 calibre revolver at Mrs. Evelyn McKenzie, 28, Baltimore, in front of the Little Ritz restaurant, West Main street, Frostburg, at 9 p. m.

Mrs. McKenzie was struck by one of the shots, Sheriff Lucien C. Radcliffe said, adding that he believed it was the fourth shot that penetrated her thigh. She was not seriously hurt, being discharged from Miners hospital after receiving treatment for the wound.

Will Be Arraigned Today

Walter Eichhorn, Frostburg policeman, said Carey told him he was "sorry all five shots didn't hit her." Officers said Carey has admitted the shooting. He will be arraigned in trial magistrate's court here at 10 o'clock this morning.

According to the sheriff, Carey and Mrs. McKenzie had been "going together" until she moved to Baltimore. Then, Radcliffe added, although Carey had made several trips there to see her she refused to go out with him.

Carey told Beamer he bought the revolver about four weeks ago with the intention of shooting Mrs. McKenzie, the trooper said, purchasing it from William Hopkins, Frostburg, for $4.

Carey, who has a cork leg and a glass eye, told the officers, Beamer said, that he wanted to put Mrs. McKenzie in the same condition he is in.

Officer Eichhorn, who arrested Carey while he was seated at the bar in the Little Ritz, said the man shot at the woman from an automobile parked in front of the restaurant as she came out of the establishment. Hopkins was seated in the car beside Carey, officers said.

Sister Explains Shooting

Explaining the shooting, Mrs. McKenzie's sister, Mrs. Beulah Wempler, said Carey had been molesting Mrs. McKenzie for sometime. Last night she, Mrs. McKenzie and Mrs. Jeanette Yoders, another sister, were about to leave the Little Ritz when she saw Carey in the car in front of the restaurant, Mrs. Wempler related. Then, she said she asked her sister to leave the establishment with her. They had started for their automobiles when Carey opened fire from his machine.

After he was shot, officers said, Mrs. McKenzie returned to the restaurant and later was taken to the hospital.

An unidentified man, Officer Eichhorn explained, struck Carey after he had shot at Mrs. McKenzie and knocked the gun from his hand. It was picked up by a woman and was secured from her by the officer after he had taken Carey to the Frostburg jail.

Eichhorn said he removed a leather holster from Carey's waist and Sheriff Radcliffe said he found six bullets in Carey's possession.

Carey is an employee of the Little Ritz and Mrs. McKenzie had worked there until several months ago when she moved to Baltimore. She had just returned to Frostburg yesterday.

Togo's

stated that he resigned "for personal reasons." Japanese politicians, even when the issue is only a minor point of domestic policy, usually resign for "ill health."

Togo, a frail, elderly man with a fragile almost inaudible voice, could easily claim failing health.

When he was recalled from Moscow to Tokyo last October to take the foreign portfolio in General Tojo's military dictatorship cabinet, Togo was billed by Japanese propaganda as the man who could and would preserve a semblance of amiable relations along the Northern border.

As ambassador in Moscow at the time of Yosuke Matsuoka's junkie to Europe, Togo prepared the ground for Matsuoka's treaty of neutrality with Stalin in the spring of 1941 a few weeks before Hitler's assault on the Soviets.

Now, scarcely fifteen months later, Japan seems at least preparing to violate the treaty. Correspondents who have been in Tokyo will remember the Latin phrase, roughly translatable as "according to the conditions of the time," which spokesman Koh Ishii used a year ago to describe Japan's position on the Neutrality pact.

What he meant was that Japan would observe the treaty as long as conditions prevailing when the document was signed continued to exist. The story was quickly exposed.

Perhaps Premier Tojo, the razor-sharp whip of the army clique who rules Japan today, has decided conditions have changed.

"It is obviously essential," the committee said, "that restrictive measures on gasoline consumption in District 1 (East) be sufficiently effective to reduce gasoline consumption to correspond to indicated supplies, as otherwise there will not be available sufficient transportation to build stocks of residual fuel oils up to the levels required to meet winter demands."

Police Hold Man For Firing Five Shots at Woman

Baltimore Resident Is Struck by One Bullet in Frostburg Shooting

Frank Carey, 29, Frostburg, was held in Allegany county jail last night after he allegedly fired five shots from a .38 calibre revolver at Mrs. Evelyn McKenzie, 28, Baltimore, in front of the Little Ritz restaurant, West Main street, Frostburg, at 9 p. m.

Mrs. McKenzie was struck by one of the shots, Sheriff Lucien C. Radcliffe said, adding that he believed it was the fourth shot that penetrated her thigh. She was not seriously hurt, being discharged from Miners hospital after receiving treatment for the wound.

Will Be Arraigned Today

Walter Eichhorn, Frostburg policeman, said Carey told him he was "sorry all five shots didn't hit her." Officers said Carey has admitted the shooting. He will be arraigned in trial magistrate's court here at 10 o'clock this morning.

According to the sheriff, Carey and Mrs. McKenzie had been "going together" until she moved to Baltimore. Then, Radcliffe added, although Carey had made several trips there to see her she refused to go out with him.

Carey told Beamer he bought the revolver about four weeks ago with the intention of shooting Mrs. McKenzie, the trooper said, purchasing it from William Hopkins, Frostburg, for $4.

Carey, who has a cork leg and a glass eye, told the officers, Beamer said, that he wanted to put Mrs. McKenzie in the same condition he is in.

Officer Eichhorn, who arrested Carey while he was seated at the bar in the Little Ritz, said the man shot at the woman from an automobile parked in front of the restaurant as she came out of the establishment. Hopkins was seated in the car beside Carey, officers said.

CHAPTER TWENTY-THREE

THEY ATE hastily and went out by the back door.

"Take your choice of a motor," Barbara's silken-clad prince said grandly, with a gesture that included the line of motors in the drive. "I'm going to borrow one and it might as well be a good one."

"In that case, hadn't it better be the first one in the line?"

He tucked her in, folding a robe over her knees and under her feet. Then he went around to the other side and got in. He smiled down at her, as if the sight pleased him, and said, "Comfortable?"

The one little word, spoken that way, was like a warm blanket around her. She nodded.

Now that the music and laughter were indoors, the night was very quiet and the stinging tread of the tires on the road and their murmured voices were all that broke the silence.

He said, "Tell me the way."

She told him, and they said little things about the night, the winter and the party, unimportant things, but when they came to her house and he came around to open the door for her, he said, "I haven't said half the things I wanted to say. There are things I want you to tell me. I want to know you. May I come in for a cigarette?"

"I'd like you to," she said. "I'd like to know things about you, too."

Ruth Calder had left a fire that had burned to embers in the hearth. They put dry sticks on and soon the shabby room was warmed and lighted by crackling flames.

They talked about books and people and places and cigarette smoke curled around their heads while time slipped into the past and the clock struck twice and they looked at each other, surprised at its night.

"Will I see you again?" he said at the door.

"I hope so."

"You turned a nightmare into a dream," he said cryptically.

She gave him her hand and he held it for a moment and let it go with an abrupt gesture.

Although he didn't see her, she lifted her hand and waved as the car disappeared from view and she stood in the cold, liking it as she leaned against her door.

She went in reluctantly, reluctant to have the night end, and remembered that she didn't even know his name. It had seemed unimportant.

She sat down in the chair where she had sat opposite him to remember the past hour. It wasn't words that came back to her, because the words they said to each other didn't matter; these were only chords for the thread of melody that was unspoken understanding between them. She was remembering the kindly light in his eyes, the way they crinkled at the corners when he laughed, the timber of his laughter. She remembered the gray of his eyes and the touch of silver at his temples, the ruddiness in his cheeks and the way he carried his big head proudly on fine shoulders, the masculinity of him that knew so well how to be tender.

Something leaped inside her bosom thinking of that and what it would mean to a woman to be loved by a man like that.

The fire sputtered and she got up and covered the embers with ashes. She whistled for the cocker. He came in sleepily and lay down with paws up. She covered him with his blanket and went to put out the lamp beside the chair that showed a deep depression.

Something gleamed on the table and she picked it up, smiling a little, wondering if he'd left it as an excuse to come back. It was the lighter with which he had lit her cigarette.

She picked it up and held it to the light to look at it. There were two initials engraved on the field of gold. She turned it over.

"T. K." she said. "Tom Kilcran!"

She put it back on the table and pulled the cord on the lamp and went out of the room in darkness.

When she opened the door of her shop, the wind and the rain came in with Barbara. She took off her hat and shook the drops from it.

"I think," she said, "that it is base calumny to call this kind of a day a 'blue' Monday. It's nothing but gray and mud-colored. The rain seems to be coming up as well as down. I wouldn't let Sonny go back to school for the afternoon session."

She stripped off her wet coat and Ellen Cassidy came forward to take it from her. "I was anxious for you to come back because there's lots of news for you. . . . Here, sit in front of the fire and dry your feet."

Barbara thanked her and looked out the window where the rain washed down like curtains of oil.

"Any of it good?" she asked.

"Swell!" the crippled girl said. "Mrs. Mitchell ordered a set of ten children's books for her granddaughter's birthday and Mr. Pinny asked me to send three detective stories over to a friend of his in the hospital. . . . Oh, Mrs. Wister, you've done all the things you told Dad you would! You've made the whole town book-minded."

Barbara reserved her immediate conclusions about the accomplishment of all the things she'd told Cassidy she was going to do. True, she had accomplished much, but only now she was learning how long it would be before she was independent.

"If it weren't for your father and his kindness, and yours, too, Ellen," Barbara said slowly, "I'd feel as if this shop were going to be washed down the drain. . . . and I'm not sure I'd care much at this moment. . . . Was there any mail?"

"It's just the day. Everybody feels blue on a day like this."

"I wish I thought it were. I don't know what I'd do for money if Ruth Calder weren't living with me."

"There were quite a few letters," the girl said hesitantly.

They exchanged glances. "I was afraid of that," Barbara said. "The first of the month! I wish they were April Fool jokes, but I'm afraid they're more ominous."

"There's a big package from a publisher."

Barbara groaned. "From Johnson, I suppose, and I haven't been able to pay for the last lot."

"But you're selling them all the time," Ellen said cheerfully. "Why, you've had to put up more shelves and the circulating department is kept moving all the time."

Barbara slumped deeply into the big chair in front of the cheerful hearth. "I haven't any complaints about that," she said glumly. "What bothers me is the bitter lesson that you have to have capital to put into a business and then forget it."

As illustrated in the Garden-Graph, ridging helps to make the soil more loose and friable. This is caused by the moisture in the soil expanding when thawed.

The soil is left in parallel ridges so that as large a surface area as possible is exposed to the action of the frost.

This also brings to the surface many grubs to be killed by freezing or eaten by the birds.

Our Flying Fortresses A Symbol of Victory

REPORTS of the effectiveness and durability of our Flying Fortresses coming in from the European battlefronts are indeed reassuring and serve to offset some of the fears expressed some time back with respect to enemy development in this field.

Colin Bednall, air correspondent of the London Daily Mail, declares that the success of these flying battleships has been firmly established in Europe and that it is likely to start a race between the United Nations and the Axis to produce a plane "akin to an aerial battleship."

"Just how well it has established itself within the short space of a fortnight," Bednall writes, "is now the subject of close study by startled experts on both sides of the English channel."

The fortresses, he said, have carried out more than 100 offensive sorties against the enemy in daylight without the loss of a single plane. No other bomber has such a record in Europe.

Thus does American ingenuity find itself. As for the possibility that the enemy may develop something superior or even equal to this incomparable fighting machine of the air, there may be posited the bald fact that America has produced it and the probability that, to borrow the slogan of one of our leading automobile manufacturers, when better ones are built, this nation will build them. And now that we've got our pants on and our sleeves rolled up, we'll build them first—and so finish the big job on which we are set.

Some Friendly Advice For the President

INTEREST attaches to the addresses President Roosevelt is scheduled to deliver to the nation Monday by reason of the reports indicating that in them he will set forth some new and vitally needed additional steps for curbing inflation and for speeding war production.

The New York Herald Tribune, one of the consistent supporters of the president's war program, hopes that the president will find time to examine a report which the editors of Fortune magazine have addressed to him in its September issue.

"It is written," the Herald Tribune explains, "in a spirit of friendliness and concern—friendliness toward Mr. Roosevelt personally, and concern lest a growing consciousness on the part of the people that he is not waging the war successfully may so turn them against him that he may lose the nation's support when such loss may cost the nation as much as it would cost the president. What the editors of Fortune have found in their survey is that the nation is becoming gradually aware of incompetence in our military and naval planning. They are beginning to associate this with 'muddy thinking and bungled execution.' This is at the bottom of the sense of frustration which so many Americans feel. The people are not opposed to the war as such, but to the administration of the war. They feel that we have not done well to date, and they know that we can and must win the war."

"The late Theodore Roosevelt once remarked to a group of young students of politics who were interviewing him that one of the things that struck him most forcefully as he looked back on his political career was how inevitably the American people, once they had all the facts placed before them, made a right decision. It was only when essential facts were withheld, or they were given only part of a picture, that they decided wrongly."

"This same good judgment helps the people to sense when something is going wrong—and going very wrong indeed. In the case in point what they sense is that there is something awry in the entire organization of the nation's war effort."

"This has become more and more apparent with the passage of each month. We have frequently referred to the failure of the president to establish a national war council and to delegate authority as well as responsibility to well chosen individuals. The editors of Fortune now summarize the needs under three heads—a unified military command, a unified political command and a unified economic command."

"This is another way of saying that many of our present troubles are due to lack of unification. This, in turn, spells a lack of organization. The responsibility for this, of course, is directly traceable to Mr. Roosevelt's well known dislike for allowing power to get out of his own hands, and to his partiality for dividing authority in such a manner that action is stymied or too long delayed."

"We come back to this point not in any spirit of personal criticism of Mr. Roosevelt, but merely because, like the editors of Fortune, we are profoundly uneasy about the mounting evidences that Mr. Roosevelt is being prevented by many influences from setting about the reorganization of the administrative war machine and that this is delaying the exclusive concentration of the White House upon the sole and single purpose of winning the war.

"No one for a moment would suggest that Mr. Roosevelt is not as eager as the rest of us to see the war carried to a quick victory. But the burdens on him are so many that a way must be found to divest him of many of them if for no other reason than to permit him to give more time to problems of global strategy. The improvements can be made only through his own action. On the quickness with which he appreciates this and does something about it will rest his own and the nation's success in the war effort."

Many citizens hope the president will give heed to this friendly advice. Particularly so do those who have been smarting under criticisms frequently emanating from Washington that the people are complacent about the war and who have been looking eagerly for the determined leadership they feel is needed to direct their energies and efforts in more effective manner. It is time for the president to get tough.

A Coastal Hot Spot

THE ANOMALY of French Guiana's status in South America is intensified by Brazil's entrance into the war. The question is: How long will the situation be allowed to continue?

French Guiana is on the northeast coast of South America sandwiched in between Dutch Guiana and Brazil, both belligerents. French Guiana is controlled from Vichy, which is openly collaborating with Germany and favors an Axis victory.

Present dispatches from Dutch Guiana report great military activity in French Guiana. The French are reported to have fortified strategic islands off the coast— islands which dominate South Atlantic sea lanes.

It is reasonable to believe that French Guiana is of considerable value to the Axis in its submarine campaign in the Atlantic. Undoubtedly French Guiana sends important shipping information to U-boats at sea. Quite probably there are submarine bases in French Guiana or the islands it controls. Furthermore, it is only a short flight from air bases in French Guiana to the vital bauxite mines in Dutch Guiana— mines which produce most of the raw aluminum for American war planes.

Having a strategic territory in league with the Axis in such a position in South America is comparable to having Georgia or South Carolina on the Atlantic Coast in league with the Axis. How long would it be permitted to send information to the enemy or act as a source of supplies for enemy submarines preying on American shipping?

As it is, far too much information goes secretly to the enemy from Axis agents in the Western Hemisphere. To be successful, American efforts to combat the submarine menace would certainly seem to demand the elimination of a hotbed of activity openly hostile to the cause of the United Nations.

News items chronicling "back-to-work" movements in war plants causes speculation as to why "back-to-work" movements should be necessary.

A trap to snag Axis dive bombers has been devised, we read. The ideal bait would be a building that looks like a hospital or a school.

"Japs to get surprise if they try to attack Alaska." So sorry, the Japs also to get surprise if they don't try to attack Alaska.

The Child in the House

By MARSHALL MASLIN

The father and mother thought: "We need a rest. We'll send the youngster to his grandmother and then there will be Heavenly Peace in the House. We'll do as we please and be free for a week or two. We'll enjoy ourselves without responsibility."

So they did. They sent Tommy away. And for two or three days it was just as they thought it would be: Heavenly Peace and Quiet. They went when and where they wished to go, all by themselves, and worried about nothing.

When they put anything away it stayed there. . . . The house was immaculate and stayed that way. Meals were orderly. Nobody said: "Tommy, your father is talking—don't interrupt. Tommy, don't speak when your mouth is full! Tommy, wash your hands! Tommy, wash your neck! Tommy, wash your teeth! Tommy, it's time to go to bed!"

Nobody said these things, because Tommy—mischievous, obstreperous, laughing, annoying, destructive, healthy, and disobedient Tommy—wasn't there. He was miles away with his grandmother. . . . He might be getting a cold, he might be falling out of a tree and breaking his leg, and his grandmother in all probability was spoiling him. . . . And father and mother sat at home alone, eating their meals quietly, without a care, without an annoyance, in Blissful Peace. Someone else was worrying about Tommy.

But they couldn't stand it. The house was like a graveyard. They weren't a family any more, they were just two persons living within four walls, under a roof. There wasn't any child in the house, so it wasn't a home! Their lives were incomplete. They'd been fed up with a noisy youngster and now they found themselves fed up with having him away.

So they went—and they got him—and they brought him home. And the first thing he did was climb up to the sink to get himself a glass of water and he dropped it and spilled it all over the kitchen floor. But they didn't mind that a bit—Tommy was back!

Brazil's Vargas a Great Stimulant For His Country

By CHARLES P. STEWART
Central Press Columnist

WASHINGTON—Now that Brazil, of which he is president, is in the war against the Nazis and their allied Fascists, Getulio Vargas's personality is a matter of the liveliest interest in Washington.

It stands scrutiny pretty well. Getulio has been somewhat unfavorably described as a dictator. Technically that seems to be what he is. Anyway, a few years ago, as what he considered part of his presidential duty, he abolished the then existing Brazilian constitution and congress and took exclusive charge of his country's policies, foreign and domestic, and of its economic development, as an unlimited chief executive.

Remedy Needed

It appears, though, that Brazil needed it. Maybe it was a dangerous remedy to prescribe for his ills, but it obviously was suffering from 'em.

In volume and variety of natural resources it's the richest area on earth, and bigger than the United States, as has been advertised often enough. It wasn't being developed, however.

Illustrative of the fashion in which its possibilities were being neglected, its Upper Amazon region simply overflows with rubber trees, which, to be sure, require cultivation to make 'em properly productive, but cultivation will do it, and it wasn't being attended to. Its promotion was one of the activities which Getulio promptly took in hand, and if, as dictator, he'd been on the job about a decade sooner, today Brazilians would be supplying us with all the rubber we're in the throes of such a famine for.

Vargas a Stimulant

Resources that President Vargas COULD develop faster than he could develop rubber culture, he has developed faster.

Industrially he's simply multiplied the republic.

The fact is that Brazil's people are largely tropical folk of a type that isn't overly enterprising. It needs stimulation to make it exert itself and prosper, and a stimulant is just what Getulio Vargas is.

Germans are the only foreigners who for quite a while, have been really ambitious to exploit Brazil for their own benefit and for all they could get out of it.

Italians apparently didn't think of it. Spaniards and Portuguese couldn't finance any penetration worth speaking of.

Uncle Sam was just too dumb to get the idea until very lately.

Germans Colonize

But the Germans away back in the Kaiser's day, already were well advanced in their missionary work. They immigrated in formidable numbers, but they settled in a midling solid community, giving 'em local strength, and far to the southward, under favorable temperate climatic conditions. There's no question that they aimed at control of Brazil in toto—probably not its formal transfer to Berlin's jurisdiction, but its complete German domination, virtually as a colony.

World War No. 1 delayed this program's fulfillment, but the German-Brazilian element began reorganizing it as soon as it could catch its breath after the Armistice, and was about ready for a coup when Getulio Vargas proclaimed his so-called dictatorship.

Herr Hitler at first was acquiescent, evidently believing he could make a stooge of Getulio, like Duce Mussolini or Pierre Laval.

Directly following his discovery, though, that Getulio was 100 per cent independent, Brazil's German colonists undertook to tell him "where to get off at," and Getulio suppressed 'em with a considerable number of casualties.

U. S. Indebted to Him

If that wasn't a case in which a dictatorship was justifiable, it's hard to think of one where it could be.

Well, Getulio's been an economically constructive genius. In this respect he's benefitted Brazil, and

Jap Withdrawal from Chuhsien Gives New Opportunity for Bombing Tokyo

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1.—It is astonishing that the Japs, with all their artillery and planes, chose to withdraw from Chuhsien, the largest air field in China—the one we can now use to bomb Tokyo.

The Chinese naturally claim a victory at that point, but their announcements make it clear to the practiced eye that the Japs failed to confront them with formidable forces, and Tokyo claims the retreat was a planned withdrawal.

What then makes this field—so desirable to the Japs last May that they started a new China campaign—now not worth fighting for? Only one explanation seems plausible.

The Japs must believe we will shortly get airfields which are even closer to Japan. They must be intending to attack Russia, and open a new theater of operations for themselves and for us. They must be withdrawing from China to strengthen their forces on the Russian border.

Their only successful general, Yamashita, is supposed to be in Manchuria now, looking over the ground while it may seem to be a little late in the year for major operations so far north, the Jap invasion of Manchukuo was started in the same season (Sept. 18, 1931) and fighting continued through much of the winter.

The writer lists these six rules by which the individual may keep his bubbling feelings in check:

1. Stop and think before you emit.
2. Remember that nobody and no thing is always all bad or all good.
3. Cut out the superlative degree from your grammar entirely.
4. Learn how to profit by your own emotional mistakes.
5. Don't forget that there are always two sides to a story.
6. Be suspicious of strong statements. People making them are usually prejudiced and poorly informed. Don't be like that yourself.

Obvious Answer

From the Cincinnati Times-Star

What to do with so-called press releases, when the press, for whose information they are supposed to be formulated, dots not want them released? The obvious answer would seem to be to cease releasing them. At any rate, that is the solution offered by newspapers of the Keystone State. The Executive Committee of the Pennsylvania Newspaper Publishers' Association, comprising seventy-five editors and publishers, has called on Washington to "stop the flow of propaganda and mislead general news releases to newspapers."

Boosting bureau chiefs and coloring the news—a technique elaborated by the New Deal—are objectives too ambiguous to warrant the yearly expenditure of tens of millions of dollars and the withholding from military service of thousands of able-bodied young men. The only Washington releases which mean much of anything to the press are the Army and Navy communiqués. They tell what people want to know, and, brothers, they are short.

every available vessel they had in that part of the world. Some came from Rabaul, others from nearby bases.

Mr. Roosevelt once idly called the resultant attack only a "reconnaissance" in force, but the Navy department announced the Japs had transports with them, and no one goes reconnoitering with troops. In fact, MacArthur disclosed a force of 900 was landed on Guadalcanal island, and all of it met death or capture.

Short of Carriers

This was clearly an effort by the Japs to recapture the southern Solomons, and it failed, because our bombers knocked out their only two aircraft carriers. The Japs could not proceed without airpower, had to withdraw, leaving us in undisputed control.

Any Pacific map will show our lines of supplies to Australia have been cleared by this Solomon success. Other Jap airbases are too far back from the steamship routes to do much damage.

Coupled with the Jap loss of Milne bay, the Solomons success also makes impossible the invasion of Australia on the populous eastern side. The Japs will have to get New Guinea, or the Solomons, or both, for bases, before invasion can be attempted hereafter through the Coral Sea.

Guiding principle of the Japanese is face-saving. Even the Tokyo broadcasters can see that some of it is required by the toe-crunching they have received.

Return Attack Expected

Authorities, who have the South seas area particularly in mind, suspect the Japs will try to muster a large naval invasion force, and go back into the Solomons and New Guinea. Their second Solomons attack, however, showed they have little naval strength available in that quarter.

They are particularly short on aircraft carriers, since we blasted most of this Jap category out of the water at Midway. They cannot invade without carriers, and when they come back next they will meet our land-based bombing planes from that excellent field on Guadalcanal.

Other points at which they could strike are Alaska and India, but Alaska is foggy and not good fighting territory, while India already is being prepared, by fifth columnist and disobedience activities, to fall into the Jap lap without a costly major campaign.

Consequently most eyes here are trained on the Manchurian-Russian border.

Contract Law Is Protested as a Production Curb

By DAVID LAWRENCE

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1.—Some day the government at Washington—and particularly Congress—must realize that it cannot just keep adding management headaches day after day and expect management, already short of experienced executives, to carry on efficiently the bigger and bigger job of industrial production required to win the war.

The latest headache is the "renegotiation" of contracts. Because some selfish and narrow-minded business men have abused the profit margin in government contracts, the political demagogues have now forced a reconsideration of all contracts to the point where the ninety-nine percent of the country's contractors who are patriotic and co-operative are to be subjected to the penalties of an inspection and renegotiation system that has behind it no definite or calculable yardstick for operating a business.

The gravity of this new time-wasting and energy-wasting policy is best illustrated by a telegram which has just been received by every member of the House and the Senate, from one of the largest producers of ammunition for the United States Navy, a company that has been in business for more than ten years and has had a chance to encounter and comply with every form of red tape ever devised. He is John B. Hawley, Jr., president of the Northern Pump Company, of Minneapolis, Minn.

Normal Procedure "Wrecked"

"War machinery production has continuously declined since Renegotiation Law No. 528 was passed on April 28 last," the telegram stated. "Renegotiation has made all of the efficient fixed price contractors which are the backbone of defense machinery production operate on a cost plus basis, thereby wrecking all normal established procedure so that they can conform to renegotiation board's cost-plus-a-percentage-of-cost rulings."

"All contractors now know that past and present contracts with the United States government are worthless and that they can be destroyed at the whim of any inexperienced local bookkeeper without practical appeal. Industrial leaders know that renegotiation boards are using kid glove methods until after the new tax bill becomes a law and elections are over."

Executive Ability "Wasted"

"Contractors are nauseated by continuous audits by inexperienced groups of local auditors wastefully duplicating experienced federal income tax audits, and wasting executive ability which is badly needed to maintain production under adverse conditions such as conscription, labor unions, material shortages, design changes, production schedule changes, etc."

"The manufacturer can only profit after taxes are paid and you can certainly make a tax law limiting war profit to a small percentage after payment of federal taxes. Then the manufacturer has every incentive to finish his contracts in the shortest period of time and at the lowest possible cost."

"Renegotiation forces contractors to diminish shipments so as to maintain high costs or have their contract price cut as soon as they reach peak efficiency. Investigate costs of material under cost-plus-fixed-fee contracts and in government operated shops compared to net costs to the government on fixed price contracts less income taxes on profit. Then, if you desire to bankrupt the nation and lose the war, keep Public Law No. 528, thereby placing all war contracts on a cost-plus-a-percentage-of-costs basis."

Inflation Seen

"This war will require a hundred times as much war machinery as did the last war and if this machinery must be produced on the old cost-plus basis under Public Law No. 528, inflation is inevitable. I was in Germany five years ago and even then their factory efficiency was superb. I have built naval machinery for ten years. This corporation is the largest private producer of naval ordnance machinery. This telegram is a desperate personal plea on behalf of independent manufacturers operating on fixed price contracts to let up operate efficiently."

Since Public Law No. 528 was passed the price adjustment boards in the War and Navy departments have struggled to devise a formula but through conscientiously attempted it is an ex post facto action and does not enable a manufacturer to tell either in advance of taking a contract or while he is executing it just where he is coming out. Industry can't operate under that cloud of uncertainty. The Senate Finance committee has under consideration a plan to limit profits after taxes and that's the sensible approach.

Children Should Learn To Help with The Housework

Mother Tells of Son and Daughter Who Aid
Her at Home

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph.D.
It is refreshing to read about children who learn to help at home and take responsibility there. A farm mother writes of her girl 15 and boy 13:

"Everybody at our home has to work. The two older children help me with the chickens. We raise about 1000 a year, keeping 100 hens all through the year. We keep a strict account of every penny we spend. Then, we divide the profits three ways. They use their money to buy their clothes and for other expenses. Besides this, when they pack the sugar corn and help me pack peaches they are paid by the hour.

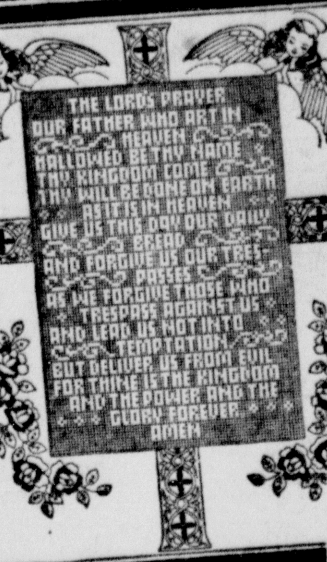

"Work around the house and helping with the cows and all such jobs are not paid for. I've never required it of them, but I believe they always tell me of every cent of money they spend. We always talk over the clothes problem for I make most of my daughter's clothes. She can sew fairly well and helps me lots with the sewing. Also she keeps her room tidied.

"Last year I went to visit my mother, taking the baby with me. While I was away the two older children fixed their breakfast and my husband fixed his breakfast for himself. The children bought lunch at school. Then my daughter planned and cooked the dinner at night and made the beds and kept the house in very good order. (We had talked over some simple menus that she could fix.) She also had to take care of the milk from one cow. In school she makes good grades. Her teacher speaks well of her as a good sport.

Son Works on Farm
"The oldest son is very helpful on the farm. Of course, since his father doesn't approve of men doing housework, he doesn't like to work around the house; so I let that drop long ago for he does have quite a lot of other things to do. He makes almost the highest grades in his class and goes in for sports, especially baseball."

his head that a boy should not do housework. While this attitude is not so harmful on the farm where there are girls as well as boys, it robs the boy of the kind of home education which should best fit him to be a husband and father.

This very attitude of the father might help explain some of the remarks in the letter from which he foregoes was quoted "My husband places almost the entire responsibility of the children and home on my shoulders. In other words, it seems that he thinks he should never turn his hands to doing a thing in and about the house."

Then she refers to him as not winning the cooperation of the children nor understanding them. This would naturally follow, you see. This mother not only win the cooperation of the children but while doing so increases her ways of understanding them, and her companionship with them.

It is possible, of course, that this mother, keen in winning the cooperation of her children, might not have used similar wisdom in winning cooperation from her husband. All too many mothers don't.

Solving Parent Problems
Q. Should parents and other loved ones keep the letters from young men in the armed forces?
A. As a rule, yes. Some of these letters will prove of great interest and value to the writer years later and to his children and grandchildren. With the writer's permission, some of these letters would be useful material for the classroom.

Donald L. Rockwell Weds Miss Virginia Digman
Ceremony Is Performed in Baltimore; Reception Follows Wedding

Miss Virginia Digman, Cumberland, became the bride of Donald L. Rockwell, drill instructor of the United States Marine Corps, Parris Island, N. C., August 30.

The wedding ceremony was performed at 6 p. m. Sunday in the Methodist church near Harford road, Baltimore, with the Rev. Mr. Richardson, pastor, officiating.

Miss Mary Frances Rockwell, sister of the bridegroom, was maid of honor and Miss Hannah Golladay, Cumberland, was bridesmaid. Charles T. Carney, Jr., Cumberland, served as Mr. Rockwell's best man.

The bride, who was given in marriage by P. Harry Rockwell, was attired in a white satin wedding gown with a long sweeping train, her full length veil of bridal illusion was held by a coronet of flowers and she carried a bouquet of white roses, gardenias and gladioli with sprays of baby's breath.

Both the bride attendants were attired in gowns of pastel blue with which they wore matching accessories and corsages of orchids.

The mother of the bridegroom wore an evening dress of white and a corsage of orchids.

The bride attended Allegany high school. The bridegroom, the son of Mr. and Mrs. F. Harry Rockwell, 2913 Montebello terrace, Baltimore, formerly of Cumberland, was graduated from Fort Hill high school in 1939, and after one and a half years at the University of Maryland resigned to join the marines.

Following the ceremony a wedding reception was held at the home of the bridegroom's parents with approximately seventy-five guests attending. The home was elaborately decorated in fall flowers and the supper table was centered with a large tiered wedding cake, decorated with a miniature marine in blue and his bride.

As the bridegroom had only a seventy-two hour furlough the wedding-trip was postponed until later. Mr. Rockwell returned to Parris Island last evening and Mrs. Rockwell will join him there later.

Germers Are Found To Be More Important Than Diet in Teeth Decay, Doctor Says

LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D. "He has such strong teeth!" Good old expression! Indicative of a man's virility—even more so than hair on the chest. Usually accompanied by an explanatory anecdote such as what he could do in two. Just how strong are teeth? Is there any test of standard or measurement? We reject biting penny nails in two. That is border legend. Paul Bunyan stuff. But yes, there have been standards and measurements set up. The restless mind of modern research has even turned to the pound-pressure crushing power of the teeth. If you are average, you have a crushing power of 100 to 160 pounds in your back molars and 30 to 80 pounds in the front incisors. The highest pressure recorded was in a physician and dean of a medical school who exerted 270 pounds pressure. He probably had more, but that is as high as the crushometer recorded. Dogs, it is estimated, must exert a pressure of over 350 pounds when crushing bones. Factors of Strong Teeth. What factors enter into strong teeth is a matter of speculation. It is probably due more to firm fixation of the teeth in the jaw than the chemical structure of the teeth themselves. Average teeth, if firmly fixed, will stand all the crushing power the masseter muscles can put on them. Decayed or carious teeth and those surrounded by pyorrhea are naturally not as reliable as intact, well-fixed teeth. The old controversy as to whether dental caries (dental decay) is caused by nutritional factors due to a poorly balanced diet or due to germ activity has been approached from a new angle by Drs. Collins, Jensen and Beck in the Journal of the American Dental Association. One school of thought maintains that decay of teeth can be prevented and controlled simply by "a complete and optimum dietary program," while the other school maintains that it is caused by the presence and activity of germs in the mouth, specifically the germ called "lactobacillus acidophilus," and that this is not controlled by supplementing the diet with vitamin D, but depends on the amount of sugar in the diet. Dr. Collins and his co-workers had the idea of taking groups with healthy teeth free from decay and inquiring about their diets and the number of germs in their mouths. They divided the persons studied into three groups: Group I was completely caries-free and 81 per cent of them had no lactobacillus germs in the mouth. Group II had a great deal of decay and 87 per cent had a high count of lactobacillus in the mouth. Group III had questionable decay activity and 59 per cent had lactobacillus in the mouth.

The diets of all three groups showed little difference. The caries-free group had no more protein, calcium, phosphorus, carotene, thiamine, vitamins C and D than the caries-rampant group. Probably both factors operate, but these studies indicate that the germs are more important than the diets. Questions and Answers O. S.: Please give me some information about the vitamin con-

Bungling Bombardiers Wear Miniature Bombs

MIDLAND ARMY FLYING SCHOOL, Tex. (AP)—If you meet a young man wearing a bomb around his neck at this bombardier college, don't be surprised. He's the "Dud of the Day," and the baby blue miniature bomb he wears is the bombardier cadet's equivalent of sackcloth and ashes, presented to the cadet guilty of the day's outstanding bombing bungle.

Each "Dud of the Day" wears his decoration 24 hours, then awards it to a new "winner."

Perfect Chance, But Little Profit

NEW YORK, (AP)—It was one chance in several million, but it didn't pay off that way when Kay Kyser, orchestra leader, picked up a completely matched gin rummy hand.

He expected to cash in with a big score. But his opponent had a fluke hand, too, with an unmatched total of only 2 points, and Kay's total profit was just 22.

Romantic Background Is Given Gripping Drama

Against the colorful but incidental background of the great American game of baseball, Samuel Goldwyn brings to the screen one of the greatest real life dramas of the past decade in "The Pride of the Yankees" starring Gary Cooper, starting today at the Liberty.

It tells the inspiring story of the late Lou Gehrig, son of humble immigrant parents, who climbed to national fame on the baseball diamond. It reveals the good sportsmanship, the devotion to his family and friends and the heroic courage which carried him down the Long, Long Trail, at only thirty-seven with a smile on his lips. It is a narrative of homespun romance and delightful humor, highlighted by the sublime bravery of a great American.

The supporting cast includes Teresa Wright, Walter Brennan, Virginia Gilmore, Ernie Adams, Harry Harvey, Pierre Watkin, Spencer Charters and other well known players, as well as Babe Ruth, Bill Dickey, Robert W. "Bob" Meusel and Mark Koenig, former team mates of Gehrig.

Veloz and Yolanda dancing duo, and Ray Noble and his Orchestra have specialty performances in "The Pride of the Yankees."

A motion picture whose greatness is apparent long before "the end" is reluctantly reached, Columbia's impressively exciting new George Stevens production, "The Talk of the Town," opened today at the Maryland theater. With Cary Grant, Jean Arthur and Ronald Colman

UNUSUAL FACTS REVEALED

ALTHOUGH CARY GRANT IS SEEN EATING NO MORE THAN 2 EGGS ON THE SCREEN, 5 DOZEN WERE EATEN ON THE SET BY THE PROP MAN BEFORE THE SCENE WAS COMPLETED.

IT COST COLUMBIA $500 TO SHAVE RONALD COLMAN'S BEARD OFF IN "THE TALK OF THE TOWN". WHAT STARTED AS A SIMPLE CLOSE-UP, WOUND UP AS AN EXTRA AGONY. BESIDES COLMAN, THE BEARD AND A STRAIGHT-EDGED RAZOR, THE STYLING WERE TWO COMPLETE CAMERAS. CREWS THE MUSICAL DIRECTOR, A ROYALTY GRAND OPERA STRE, 6 MUSICIANS TWO MAKEUP ARTISTS AND A FIRST-AID MAN... JUST IN CASE.

THE BEAUTIFUL JEAN ARTHUR'S FACE IN THE U.S. SUPREME COURT SEQUENCE IS HER OWN CREATION—GOLD DUST MIXED WITH HER MAKEUP.

BY THE TIME THE FILM WAS COMPLETED 25 BLACK EYES HAD BEEN PRINTED ON EDGAR BUCHANAN.

GLORIA FARRELL, WHO HAD TO GRAB A PLANE TO THE COAST IN A HURRY FOR HER ROLE IN "THE TALK OF THE TOWN," ARRIVED AT THE STUDIO CLAD IN A PINK NIGHTGOWN AND A PUR CASE.

starred in roles of rich, memorable magnitude, the new film is a triumphant example of superb picture-making at its best.

Miss Arthur's performance, like those of her co-stars, is equally outstanding, a performance both ingratiating and feminine, heroic in its dramatic scenes and soft and winsome in the gentler moments. The nicest girl gossip ever went to town on, Miss Arthur, possesses throughout that faint trace of indiscretion which highlights the climactic sequences of the brilliant film. Colman, wrapped in the austerity of the judicial robe, looking down from his high place on the supreme court bench, where he sits with eight others equally dignified and equally wise men, sees Miss Arthur impudently, proudly winking at him. What is there for a Justice of the United States Supreme Court to do? He winks back!

Valuable to the complete effect of "The Talk of the Town" are much lesser players as Edgar Buchanan, Glenda Farrell and Tom Tyler. But the new film is, essentially, the story of a peculiarly human triangle, adroitly involved in a rich and racy romantic comedy.

Anne Baxter Enters New Phase in Movies

On reaching the age of nineteen, Anne Baxter's career has started on a new phase. Twentieth-Century-Fox launched a campaign to develop the comedy young miss as a glamor girl.

At the time the studio signed Anne three years ago, her parents the Kenneth Baxters, asked that the movie executives wait until she was nineteen before starting her through the Hollywood "glamorizing bill."

In "The Pied Piper," due Saturday at the Strand theater which features her with Monty Woolley and Roddy McDowall, Miss Baxter plays the first role in which she required an extensive wardrobe. And thus is started the first step in the glamor build-up of any star.

The studio plans to cast her next is a typical "siren" part. Anne will be tested for the role of a night club entertainer in Twentieth-Century-Fox's "White Collar Girl."

So don't be surprised if in the near future Hollywood halls a new glamor queen, Miss Anne Baxter.

Rain Dance Halts Rain

Breaking centuries-old precedent, hundreds of Santa Clara Indians recently went into a ceremonial dance to halt a heavy downpour of rain so that a Hollywood motion picture company could work.

For two days Lucille Ball, James Craig, Sir Cedric Hardwicke and other Hollywood actors and more than 500 Indians on location near Taos, New Mexico, on scenes for RKO's picturization of the Clarence Budington Kelland story, "Valley of the Sun," now at the Garden theater, were idle because of the rains.

As a consequence, Joseph P. Tafoya, governor of the Santa Clara tribe, called his people to stage a ceremonial to stop the deluge, an unprecedented request. Forming a circle in the center of their pueblo, the Indians beat drums and chanted rhythmically as they prayed to the rain god.

Late in the afternoon the sun came out briefly before sinking behind the mountains, and the medicine men solemnly announced that the rain god had looked with favor in their request.

Whether it was coincidence or not, the company had no more rain trouble during its stay on the location site.

Elliott, Ritter Are Co-starred in New Film

Generally considered two of Hollywood's most popular action aces, Bill Elliott and Tex Ritter return to the Embassy theater tomorrow in "The Devil's Trail," their latest Columbia outdoor adventure film. Lovely Eileen O'Hearn and the equally lovely Ruth Ford appear in important featured roles, along with Frank Mitchell, who again appears as Cannonball, Noah Beery, Jr., and Edmund Cobb.

"The Devil's Trail" is said to bring to the screen a maximum of blazing thrills and hair-trigger excitement, with the principal action taking place in a deserted prairie town, in the heart of Kansas. Elliott and Ritter find themselves opposed to each other, the first as Wild Bill Hickok fleeing a "framed" murder charge, the latter, as a law officer sworn to bring in the fugitive. The two join forces, in the course of the gun-flaming action, when they run across a renegade band of would-be secessionists determined to make the Kansas Territory a slave state.

War's Lovelorn Lulus Are All Out of Date

By ADELAIDE KERR

Wide World Features Writer

Will the year make thousands of lonely women in America because of husband and beau shortage? Will their lives be one-sided and unhappy now and later because there are not enough men to go around?

I laid the "lonely woman" problem before three New York career women—an author, an educator and a family relation counselor—and got some surprising answers.

"I think the query is a little dated," said Fannie Hurst, the author. "Since that truism 'Love is a woman's whole existence' was written, so much water has flowed under the bridge, that it's a little water-logged. Women who are lonely in the midst of a terrific upheaval such as we are in at the moment, had better regard it as an organic symptom of not being on the bandwagon. Women who are onto the emergency haven't time for loneliness."

"As to the future, there is no question that the women to tomorrow face a serious problem, but I beg to prophesy they'll meet it, when it comes."

Dr. Esther Lloyd-Jones, head of the Personal Guidance Laboratory of Teachers College, Columbia University, says:

"Most people grieve less than you think over not being married. Except for those who enter religious orders, people don't make an act of renunciation of marriage. Their subconscious attitude is, 'I haven't yet, but may.' There is no particular pain about it."

"Besides, the modern woman doesn't devote herself exclusively on some one other person for understanding and affection. The modern woman plans and develops a good many outside interests. Result: she has less time for loneliness."

"Finally, there is no use agonizing ahead of time. This is a people's war. When it is ended, the discrepancy between the numbers of men and women may not be as great as many expect. In England bombs dropped on men, women and children alike. Also the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company reports that more people in the United States were killed in motor vehicle accidents in the last 18 months than the 50,510 members of the American Expeditionary Force who were killed in action and died of wounds during 18 months of the first World War."

Mrs. Helen Southard, consultant on family relationships for the National YWCA and its USO operations, capped the discussion with some concrete suggestions for loneliness banishers.

"There is plenty to do after jobs and war work are done," she said. "Get into community activities, tap dancing or cooking in settlements or girls' clubs. Take a course in something. Swim, play tennis, bowl. Round up more girls, go to dinner and the movies. Being dateless doesn't have to mean being forlorn."

Long Illness Is Fatal to Aged Lonaconing Man

John S. Askey, 84, Dies at His Home on Scotch Hill

LONACONING, Sept. 1.—John S. Askey, 84, well-known sportsman of Lonaconing, died this afternoon at 1:30 o'clock at his home on Scotch hill, after several years illness. Mr. Askey was also known for his interest in flowers and during his lifetime he cultivated a variety of kinds.

A native of Washau, Scotland, Mr. Askey came to this country with his parents when he was three-years old. For a number of years he was foreman of the old Midland Mining Company but retired to private life when the mine was closed.

Mr. Askey was a staunch Republican and a member of Georges Creek Valley, No. 161, A. F. and A. M. He was also a member of Garfield Royal Arch Chapter Lebanon Council and held the office of treasurer for forty years, retiring last October because of ill health.

Mr. Askey was active in local sportsmen's circles and spent the fall season of each year in hunting trips with fellow citizens.

He married the former Miss Harriet Yost, who preceded him in death ten years ago.

LaSalle High's New Grid Coach Greets Squad

Thirty Boys Appear at Initial Session; Heavy Practice Starts Next Week

Coach Jack Plum, LaSalle high's new football mentor, held a meeting of candidates for this year's team yesterday afternoon with thirty students appearing. Two of three, holdovers from last year's squad are out of town at present and are expected to report next week.

The meeting was mostly an exchange of ideas between the coach and the boys on football as the LaSalle team played it last year and what is planned for this year. The various football formations as used by teams today were diagrammed and explained along with the variations of the Notre Dame system that Coach Plum intends to use this season.

The boys reporting appeared in good physical condition and Coach Plum said he was pleased with the group not only for their physical fitness but for the interest and enthusiasm they showed at the meeting.

After the general discussion the boys were told to report for practice today at 2 o'clock on the field in the rear of St. Patrick's Catholic church. The regular practice field at Community ball park is occupied at present by a carnival. The boys were told to bring their own equipment as the regular team equipment will not be ready for distribution until Friday. A captain will be elected for the team at today's session. Practice will consist mostly of a review of football fundamentals and calisthenics until later next week.

MOOREFIELD STARTS FOOTBALL PRACTICE

Moorefield, W. Va., Sept. 1.—Football practice has started at Moorefield high with over 30 candidates drilling under the direction of Coach Fred "Tack" Clark.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 1 (AP)—Outfielder Ervin Dusak, hitting about .295 with Rochester, was recalled today by the St. Louis Cardinals for their stretch drive to overtake the Brooklyn Dodgers in the National League pennant race.

Referring to Brooklyn's acquisition of pitcher Buck Newsom, Branch Rickey, vice-president of the Cardinals, said, "they can have their Newsom, but I'd rather have Dusak."

"Dusak has extra-base hits galore," Rickey enthused. "He is one of the most sought-after players in the minor leagues."

Carter, 306 Crawford street, gained the distinction last week when he added "the rocker" to his sleeve at the tender age of 20—which doesn't seem to be bad going at all. Carter, who is mess sergeant for Co. C, 52nd Medical Training Battalion, passed his twentieth birthday last February. He enlisted in the Army, November 8, 1941, at the Walter Reed Hospital, Washington, went to Camp Barkeley last November as a corporal.

He is a graduate of Central High School, Lonaconing, and the John Huntington Polytechnic Institute, Cleveland.

first great duty confronting all is that of winning the war at the earliest possible moment. He also insisted that a pertinent issue before the voters today is that raised by the unnecessary spendings, which should be curtailed or stopped by reason of the war emergency. Beall said he felt he could speak with some justification about war efforts by reason of his service in the army in World War 1.

Gratification was expressed by Beall over the Republican showings in the registrations in the county, showing much larger listings over the Democrats in different precincts. Without exception, all the candidates called upon pledged themselves to support the winning candidates and to go down the line after the primary contest until the ballots are counted in the November election.

Among those introduced were Robert B. Kimble, of this city, and Noel Speir Cook, Frostburg attorney, candidates for state senator; James Holmes, of Lonaconing; Estel C. Kelley, Cumberland attorney; Nelson W. Russell, of Cumberland; William L. S. Walker, of Frostburg; and Charles N. Wilkinson, of Cumberland, candidates for county commissioners.

Democrats Are Split

Leo H. Miller, Hagerstown attorney, who was a late arrival, was introduced as a candidate for fourth judicial circuit associate judge. He declared Republicans have a wonderful opportunity to elect their tickets this year, because the Democrats are badly split and the people are dissatisfied. He expressed the belief that the Washington County Republican ticket had a good chance of winning, despite the 5,000 majority of registered Democrats.

Candidates for State Central committeemen who were presented to the audience included Jacob H. Brown, Fred B. Driscoll, Edgar M. Lewis and Thomas L. Popp, all of Cumberland; W. A. Strother, Charles A. Odgers, Darrel Zella, and Charles P. Rafferty, all of Frostburg; James Park, Lonaconing; Richard H. Williams, Midland; and J. Charles Carter, Eckhart.

Harry Elsel, president of the Young Men's Republican Club of Frostburg, and William L. Geppert, editor of the Cumberland News, were also introduced as party workers.

Support Is Assured

Lester Williams, of the local club of Republican colored voters, thanked the club for an invitation to participate and reported plans for increasing interest and adding members to the Progressive Voters' Association. The organization could be depended upon, he said, for strong support of the entire Republican ticket. Williams said his organization is giving particular attention to enlisting the assistance of the appropriate candidates in housing conditions here, which he said are very poor, especially with respect to members of his race.

The meeting was opened with the singing of "The Star Spangled Banner" and closed with the song "God Bless America." Mrs. Elsie Brinkman accompanied at the piano and the group singing was led by Mrs. Vada Drum Barnard.

Brooklyn Downs Pittsburgh Pirates 4 to 2

First Time Higbe Has Beaten Bucs As a Starter

Pirates Unable To Score after Filling the Bases in Seventh

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 1 (AP)—The Brooklyn Dodgers protected their grip on the National League today by beating the Pittsburgh Pirates 4 to 2 behind the five-hit hurling of Kirby Higbe and thus eliminated the Buccaneers mathematically from the pennant race.

The triumph, Higbe's fourteenth, broke a long-standing jinx the Pirates have held over the Dodgers right hander, who never before had beaten them as a starting pitcher. In his six years in the National League his only previous victory came in a relief role last year.

Higbe went the route today and fanned six men, but had two shaky innings, one of them in the fifth when the Pirates scored twice on a walk, singles by Elbie Fletcher and Vince Dimaggio, and a long fly by Babe Phelps.

Pittsburgh was unable to capitalize on its best chance, however, when it loaded the bases with none out in the seventh.

Cubs Turn Back Giants 10 to 5

Claude Passeau Scores His Eighteenth Victory of 1942 Season

CHICAGO, Sept. 1 (AP)—Claude Passeau achieved his eighteenth victory of the season today as the Chicago Cubs snapped the New York Giants' six-game winning streak with a 10 to 5 decision.

Hal Schumacher pitched hitless ball for three frames while his mates gave him a three-run sendoff, and then he blew it as the Cubs set off a six-run explosion in the sixth inning. The ruse being Bill Nicholson's nineteenth homer with one aboard.

The Giants used four hurlers, including Ace Adams, whose appearance was his fifty-fourth of the season for a new National League record surpassing the mark of fifty-three incomplete games set by Clyde Shoun in 1939. Bill Voiselle, a tall right hander who joined the Giants today from Oklahoma city, finished the game.

Ridgeley High Starts Football Practice for '42

Twenty-three Candidates Report to Jesse Rigglesman, New Coach

Ridgeley high school's new football coach, Jesse Rigglesman, was greeted by twenty-three candidates for the team yesterday afternoon at the Black and White's first grid practice. Rigglesman said he was well pleased by the turnout and size of the high school athletes.

Two practice sessions will be held daily until school opens Thursday and then sessions will be held each afternoon after class hours. Rigglesman, former Petersburg, W. Va., high griddier and captain of the team at Shepherd College in 1940, said no time will be lost as the team has a "tough" schedule.

"Our schedule calls for us to meet three of our strongest rivals, Allegheny, Fort Hill and LaSalle, within a two-week period at the start of the season," Rigglesman said, "so it's up to us to make every minute count."

Tough Job Ahead
Rigglesman, who succeeds Bill Hahn at Ridgeley, faces a big job this season in that he must develop an entirely new backfield to replace the 1941 quartet of James Thomas, Bob Washabaugh, Seth Adams and Bennett.

All of the four regular holdovers are linemen and Rigglesman should have no worries at the tackle position with a pair of 185-pounders, Jim Lindsey and Sammy Logsdon, back to handle the jobs they filled so capably last season.

Dick Arrington, center, and Edward Bean, an end, are the other regulars of a year ago still in the fold. Graduation took Clarence Hartman, a starting end, Payne and Snyder, guards, and also Bob Spriggs and Barnard.

The list of holdovers includes Kenneth Carder, guard; Francis Largent, guard; William Thompson, end; James Phillips, Paul Wolfe and James Shannan, backs, and also James Campbell, William Dietrick, Jack Herbaugh, Fred Wilson, George Amato, Lloyd Coffman, Calvin Hartman, Leroy Winterstine and Jack Grove.

Rigglesman, who had charge of sports at Elliott City, Md., high last year, indicated a captain will not be elected until later this month.

Eight-Game Schedule

Ridgeley's schedule, announced yesterday by Rigglesman, lists eight games with the West Virginia Deaf School contest pending. One conference opponent of last year, Piedmont High, has dropped football for the duration and this move coupled with anticipated transportation difficulties leaves Ridgeley with only three Potomac Valley Conference games—the battles with Keyser, Moorefield and Romney High.

Ridgeley officials did not schedule games with Parsons or other conference schools located some distance from this vicinity because of gasoline and tire rationing. Rigglesman, taking note of reports that one or two other conference schools might be forced to abandon football because qualified coaches are not available, said he would be agreeable to an arrangement calling for two games this season with LaSalle, Allegheny and Fort Hill. The Ridgeley schedule follows:

Sept. 25—Allegheny
Oct. 3—Fort Hill
Oct. 10—Ladette
Oct. 16—Keyser away
Oct. 23—Moorefield away
Oct. 30—Berkeley Springs home
Nov. 6—Romney home
Nov. 13—W. Virginia Deaf School (pending)

at fullback for G. W. from 1933 to 1935.

Meanwhile, thirty-two players reported today to Coach Johnny Baker for the first practice session. Baker praised the condition of the squad, but added: "We've got a long, hard trail ahead of us, and we'll really have to crowd in the work."

Senators Defeat Cleveland by 4 to 3 Score

Vernon Drives in Deciding Run with His Third Single of Game

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1 (AP)—The Washington Senators struck for a tenth inning score to defeat Cleveland, 4 to 3, today behind the steady hurling of Alejandro Carrasquel. Jimmy Vernon's third single of the contest drove in the deciding run.

The Indians got to Carrasquel for nine blows, while Washington landed on Jim Bagby for 9 hits and touched Chubby Dean for the tenth.

Carrasquel led off Washington's tenth with a single. George case followed with a one-baser and Stan Spence was purposely passed to fill the sacks. Dean relieved Bagby and forced Campbell to foul out, but pitched a base-hit ball to Vernon.

The victory gave Washington the series, two games to one.

Lacy's Delacets, champions of the City Softball League, would like to book evening or Sunday games with teams in this district. The Delacets wound up their regular season several weeks ago but are hopeful of landing a three-game series with the winner of the Tri-Towns League for the championship of the county. THEY'RE NAVY'S NEW ATHLETIC BOSSES

Two former Navy football stars now direct the U. S. Naval Academy's athletic program. Commander Lyman S. His right hand man is Lieutenant H. Q. (Fid) Murray, 1933 end, who has been appointed to Pop's old position as graduate manager.

The Sportlight by GRANTLAND RICE

(Released by North American Newspaper Alliance)

Tough Problem

CHICAGO—Among other somewhat tangled snarls the War department is facing a tough problem regarding sport for 1943.

It is easy enough and simple enough to say that sport will be abolished.

"This would be a bad thing," a high-ranking officer tells me. "We need sport for future physical fitness, for revenue and for morale. There is no sense in solving headaches by cutting off heads. And we'll have plenty of headaches."

"There is a very good chance that before 1943 arrives all our big league ball players, our professional football players and our college football players will be drawn into some branch of the service. We need too many men. Being married or having dependents won't help those between 20 and 45, especially those who are physically fit, as most athletes should be."

"There is little use in building up a sporting nation if these men can't be used in time of war for active service."

Looking Ahead
"What will happen to competitive sport?" I asked. "I'm referring largely to baseball and football."

"Sport will have to get along with what it has left. There won't be any stars left on the professional side. I don't think there will be many stars left on the amateur side for college football, either. There may be a few big spectacles of any sort—or none at all." But that doesn't mean that all sport will be thrown overboard. That would be a serious mistake.

With a draft limit fixed between 18 to 50, something almost certain to happen, with more and more married men drawn in—even those with families—it is difficult to see how the two major baseball leagues or the professional football leagues can operate after 1942 has slipped over the hill. Men physically equipped to play hard games are the ones that are needed above all other types.

What will be used to fill in the huge gaps is another guess.

The College Side
College football may run into the same tangle. The season just ahead will be one of the most spectacular in football history. There will be far more men playing more games, when you include the different service teams.

But with the growing need for men, especially young man power, the colleges will get a terrific railing. Which is the way it should be. On a general average to find the best type of man power we must look to youth—to those between 18 and 30. So far as war and training for war is concerned, the best years range between 18 and 25.

No one but a complete idiot can gamble on this being a short war. Suppose it isn't a short war, which few who should know think it will be. In that case the younger men, the athletes, will be among those who can help most.

Berlin in 1936
I saw a big chunk of the present German army in hard training around Berlin in 1936 during the last Olympic games. Kids by the thousands—12, 13 and 14 years old—marched mile after mile—up to 15 miles a day.

No matter what the game, youngsters must be caught and trained

Cincinnati Takes Four Game Series From Philadelphia

Frank McCormick's Single in Eleventh Gives Reds 4 to 3 Victory

CINCINNATI, Sept. 1 (AP)—The Cincinnati Reds beat Philadelphia, 4 to 3, today in 11 innings to sweep the Phils' final four-game series here.

Frank McCormick drove in three runs, including the one that beat old St. Johnson who went the entire distance and gave nine hits.

McCormick tied the score at 3-3 in the ninth inning with a short single to right after Frank Keller's double, and in the eleventh the big Reddie first baseman singled to the left field wall with the bases filled and none out.

Max Marshall opened the final frame with a drive that went for a triple on Ron Northey's misjudgment. Bert Haas and Gee Walker were walked intentionally. Then came McCormick's game-winning blow.

YOU MUST TRUST HIM
ANY EARLY bid by a tricky opponent may be a psychic. But, after enough strength has been shown by him on his play to early tricks to prove he had a pretty fair amount of strength, you can usually trust him then to hold any outstanding card or cards which might be necessary to have made his original bid thoroughly sound. Counting on him for that holding can sometimes be the guide which enables you to make an otherwise difficult contract.

South's opener was the club Q to the singleton K, and East saw at once that he would have to guess both red suits correctly, as the heart A was a sure loser. Depending on South for what his bid indicated, he led to the heart Q, the A taking. The club 10 came back, to the A, whereupon East finessed the heart 10 and 9, then scored the heart K.

When three top spades then brought discards of the club 2 and 4 from South, East counted up. Knowing South to have the club J from his leads of the Q and 10, he held originally five clubs. He also had shown he had five hearts originally and a singleton spade. Consequently he had two diamonds for his remaining cards. Further reflection indicated that, unless his opening bid was shaded very badly, he needed the diamond Q for it.

So, playing South for a doubleton Q, East dropped it with the diamond A and K, and took the last two tricks with his 10 and 9.

Total War Spirit Is Needed Now, Maj. Batson Says

Declares War Tasks Should Be Put Ahead of All Personal Considerations

Army Engineer Tells Rotarians People at Home Must Get "Mad"

Cumberland Rotarians turned their attention yesterday to ways and means of winning the war. Three speakers discussed three different angles of the general subject in a program at the Rotary luncheon at the Central Y.M.C.A. designed to stimulate the war effort in the community.

Maj. C. C. Batson, of the United States Engineer Corps, representing the Ordnance division of the War department here, vigorously urged infusion of the spirit of total war by all citizens. This, he said, must be done by putting the war task ahead of all personal considerations.

The reason is, the officer declared, is that citizens here as well as elsewhere in the nation have everything at stake in this struggle. It represents, he said, the great issue between freedom and slavery, and our efforts mean, as Lincoln said in another wartime that we shall "nobly save or meanly lose the last best hope of earth."

On the one side, Maj. Batson said, are the peoples fighting for freedom and all it connotes. On the other side are those who are hell-bent on enslavement of peoples for their own selfish ends. We, who are fighting for freedom will emerge from this great conflict free or in servitude—but it will be a fight to the finish. The issue is of such transcendent importance, Maj. Batson continued, as to call for supreme effort on the part of all—we at home must understand that the people are soldiers as well as the soldiers are people.

The people at home must get "mad" about this, the major said, adding that when the righteous indignation of the American citizenry begins to boil over, victory will be assured.

The total war spirit should override swollen wages and salaries, rising living standards, excessive rentals, pleasure driving, undue food consumption and the like, the officer declared.

War stamps and bonds must be purchased by the people as a necessary means for victory, James W. Bishop declared, and they must be purchased continually until victory comes. These purchases are not for a gentleman in a top hat known as Uncle Sam, not for the administration, not for the government, but for citizens as a whole, which means all, the speaker said.

Should Keep Bonds, Stamps Inexorable redemption of war stamps and bonds was scored as serving to add to the cost of the war instead of aiding it. There has been too much of this here, the speaker said, referring to a recent survey made at the postoffice showing that a third of the war stamps received under pay roll agreements were cashed within the next day or so following pay day.

If there are stamp and bond purchasers who dislike war, Bishop said, it behooves them to buy them for the reason that it will help to get the war over with as soon as possible.

Reminder was given that the purchase of the stamps and bonds represents an investment, rather than a contribution, which will serve as a nest egg to carry the purchaser through the critical post-war days as they come due for redemption.

The local campaign for scrap metal collection came in for emphasis from G. P. Richards, of radio station W.T.B.

The urgent need for scrap was cited in reports showing that the steel and other plants requiring it do not now have more than a two-weeks' supply and that some of them are operating twenty to thirty per cent below capacity because of the shortage.

Outlines Collection Plans Richards outlined the plans that have been made for the Cumberland scrap collection Sunday afternoon September 13. General publicity and Boy Scout house-to-house canvassing have been arranged to get people to prepare for it.

The collection will be made on the same basis as that of the city waste and garbage collection. People will gather scrap metals and place them at their curbs whence trucks will haul them to the scrap dealers. Trucks have been donated and drivers have volunteered for this work.

The proceeds of the collection will be given to the Red Cross and the United Service Organizations. Because of the urgent need, every bit of scrap metal in the community should be contributed to this collection, Richards declared.

BONDS FOR BULLETS—Walter Bucy, vice president of Local No. 258, IATSE, is shown handing two checks to Mrs. Grace M. Fisher, managing director of the Maryland and Embassy theaters, in payment for two war bonds, purchased yesterday as the motion picture industry's drive to sell a billion dollars worth of war bonds during "Salute to Our Heroes" month got underway. Local No. 258, of the International Alliance of Theater Stage Employees, purchased one bond from the Maryland and one from the Embassy. Last night at 9 p. m., theaters throughout the nation interrupted their regular programs to stage four minute presentations honoring "Our Heroes." At the Maryland, a color guard from Fort Cumberland Post, No. 13, American Legion, presented the colors and Legionnaire Joseph Fradiska sounded taps. Mayor Thomas F. Conlon spoke briefly urging "Cumberland patriots" to buy war bonds and stamps. The audience sang "The Star Spangled Banner" to open the program.

County To Borrow Funds To Pay for Hospital Addition

Commissioners Adopt Resolution Matching Expenditure of City

A resolution was passed by members of the Board of Allegany County Commissioners to borrow $37,000 to help pay for the expansion of the Memorial hospital here.

The county's donation is half of a sum needed to complete the addition to the local hospital with the City of Cumberland paying the other half. The mayor and city council have already arranged for an emergency bond issue to raise its portion of the required funds.

Additional money for the hospital program was needed according to officials, because of the present national emergency, additional defense plant activity here, with the possibility that broader hospital facilities might be suddenly required.

The expansion program at the hospital originally called for the building of a four-story addition with only the first two floors completed and equipped. The emergency which has presented itself since the original plan was adopted caused officials of the hospital, city and county to believe the two top floors should also be converted into available hospital rooms. The additional funds were therefore provided by the city and county on a fifty-fifty basis, the same as the funds for the original expansion plan.

When the resolution was read at the meeting of county commissioners yesterday there was no objection on the part of any tax payer and it was passed with little comment or discussion.

Sheriff Radcliffe Buys Interest in Detective Agency Will Operate Protective Association after His Term Expires

Sheriff Lucien C. Radcliffe, who ends his term in office December 1 of this year, has acquired an interest in the Walter W. Clay Detective Agency and the Business Men's Protective Association, and will assume the active management and operation of the joint enterprise at that time.

The agency was established here about twenty years ago by the late Walter W. Clay and operated by him until his death a short time ago. Clay was at one time a deputy sheriff of this county and was the county's first investigator assigned to the office of the state's attorney.

The agency specializes in a watchman service for business houses, private investigations and protection for industry and business. Radcliffe said he will complete his term as sheriff, but the opportunity to acquire an interest in the agency presented itself, so he purchased it. The business, he said, is an established one and will provide him with means of a livelihood after his term of office expires.

The sheriff of the county cannot succeed himself in office. Sheriff Radcliffe has been a life-long resident of the county. He served as deputy sheriff for two terms in 1920 to 1924 and was elected to the office of Allegany County Road Director in 1930. For a number of years he was engaged with his brothers in the meat business in LaVale.

2 Local Men Are Held for Breaking Into the Post Office at Hyndman

Andrew Robinson, Negro, Is Wounded; Carl Lee Jones Is Placed in Jail

Charges of burglary and breaking and entering the Hyndman, Pa. post office were entered against men identified as Carl Lee Jones, white, 22, 1016 Ella avenue, and Andrew Robinson, negro, 32, 1006 Grape alley, yesterday by Police Chief Emory Shaffer, Hyndman.

Robinson is under police guard in Timmons hospital, Bedford, Pa., where he is undergoing treatment for shotgun wounds of his right leg, inflicted by Albert Bruner, owner of a store facing the postoffice, shortly after the negro climbed from a window in the postoffice.

Jones is held in the Bedford county jail and is receiving treatment there for a fractured left arm and cuts and bruises suffered when the automobile in which he tried to escape overturned south of Bedford.

Broke Window in Door Shaffer said the attempted robbery occurred at 5:45 a. m., yesterday, and added that Robinson gained entrance to the postoffice by breaking a glass window in a front door and climbing through the opening. Jones, the chief said, waited outside the building in an automobile while the negro was inside.

Awakened by the crash of the glass as it was shattered, Bruner grabbed a double-barreled shotgun and shouted to the burglar to come out into the open. Bruner shot at the negro once as he left the postoffice and then fired again when he failed to stop.

The second shot wounded Robinson in the right leg, but he continued running along the Baltimore and Ohio railroad right-of-way as far as the Wills creek bridge where he came to a halt and was then overtaken by Shaffer and several other men.

Robinson was carried by a stretcher to a truck and then taken to the hospital by Pennsylvania Motor Police who had been summoned to the post office.

Jones, in the automobile, fled from the scene during the excitement, but his car careened from the highway three miles south of Bedford and overturned. He attempted to secure aid of passing motorists in righting the car but Shaffer and several citizens arrived in time to apprehend him. He also was taken to Bedford by motor police.

Nothing Stolen A check-up at the postoffice by Mrs. Mildred Rees, postmistress, revealed that nothing had been stolen although the drawers of the parcel post desk and stamp window had been jimmied open. She notified the postoffice inspector's office at Altoona, Pa., and William M. Livingston came to Hyndman to conduct an investigation.

Robinson admitted to police that he recently had been paroled from Western Penitentiary of Pennsylvania, Pittsburgh. Both men have police records here, local officers said, adding that Robinson has been arrested for violations of federal and state liquor laws. Both men will be arraigned before Magistrate H. N. Voorhis at an undetermined date for a preliminary hearing.

The attempted robbery yesterday morning was the second time within the past fifteen days the Hyndman office has been entered. Wesley Washington Ayers, Cone-maugh, Pa., allegedly broke into the post office August 17 and stole fifty-two cents, later recovered. Ayers was arrested before he left the post office and pleaded guilty at a preliminary hearing before Magistrate Van Voorhis. He is being held for action of the September term of county court at Bedford.

Will Return Today Local Baltimore and Ohio officials last evening reported that the new locomotive which made its trial run through Cumberland yesterday is scheduled to make the return trip today hauling No. 97 westward. This fast freight will likely arrive in Cumberland about 4:30 p. m.

Reception Given By G.O.P. Women Is Well Attended

Importance of Making Citizens Vote Conscious Stressed by President

Candidates Are Praised by Stewart Who Calls for Party Loyalty

Candidates on the Allegany county Republican primary election ballot had an unusual opportunity of meeting party voters last evening.

It was at one of the largest outpourings of Republicans held in years at a reception given for them by the Women's Republican Club of Cumberland. Many women were in the audience, which filled the hall to overflowing and which leaders declared was reminiscent of the good old party rallies of other days.

A. Charles Stewart, of Frostburg, was called to the chair after the meeting was opened by Mrs. Morgan C. Harris, club president, and he introduced the speakers of the evening.

Mrs. Harris, in welcoming the guests, gave a brief account of the work of the club, noting the need for neighborhood work resulting from wartime travel limitations and stressing the importance of making citizens vote conscious so they will take an active and intelligent interest in both primary and general elections. Party workers can do much, she advised, by taking it upon themselves to have five-minute daily discussions of civic affairs with their neighbors.

Calls for Party Loyalty Prefacing the introduction of the various candidates, Stewart prompted loud cheering in expressing his belief as an old Republican war-horse, that political trends point to the coming election, sooner or later, of a Republican Congress and a Republican president.

The chairman extolled party loyalty, stressed the beneficence of a friendly spirit and declared that those who rallied to the support of winning candidates after their own defeat, which some must naturally suffer, commanded all the greater respect and confidence of their friends.

That loyalty was to be expected because, Stewart declared, Allegany county has as fine a set of Republican candidates as it ever has had, of whom the people in general as well as party members could well be proud.

It was hoped to have at least one of the party candidates for governor at the meeting, but Stewart read a letter from Theodore R. McKeldin, Baltimore attorney, expressing regret that he was unable to come because of a previously arranged tour of Southern Maryland taking him into St. Mary's county at the time of the meeting. He expressed the hope of being able to meet with Allegany Republicans at a future late meeting. W. Pinkney West, Jr., of Baltimore county, was invited to attend but no reply was received from him.

Going down the primary ballot list, Stewart called on the various candidates present from the judicial aspirants down to the committee members.

Various Candidates Speak Ellsworth R. Routelle, of Hagerstown, candidate for Fourth judicial circuit associate judge, was the first to respond. He expressed delight over the size and spirit of the meeting, hoped the unity manifested would carry into the elections and commended the organizational work of party members in this county.

A letter from Horace P. Whitworth, Westernport attorney and unopposed candidate for the nomination for state attorney general, expressed regret over his inability to attend because of legal business requiring his presence in Baltimore.

Henry C. Triesler, of Hagerstown, candidate for Sixth district United States representative, praised the efforts of the women's club, declared the women have demonstrated their independence as thinking voters contrary to predictions made when the suffrage was extended them and said their influence in political affairs would grow with the times.

J. Glenn Beall, of Frostburg, also a candidate for the Sixth district congressional nomination, reminded party members as citizens that (Continued on Page 12, Col. 3)
